Dun's Review says of last week's business conditions in Salt Lake: "Job-bing trade is fairly good in leading lines, and business improves somewhat as the season advances, while the outlook is favorable. Business is good in drugs and very fair in hardware and mining machinery. The millinery trade improves but shoes, clothing and wool ens are quiet. The sugar and wool markets are quiet and featureless. Excepting considerable activity in mining stocks little is doing in local securities Collections are inclined to drag, but money is plenty and meeting with a fair demand. Retail trade is fair."

> John T. Carlson was yesterday after-noon examined before County Clerk James, by County Physician Mayo and Dr. Behle, touching his sanity. Behle has been treating the unfortunate man for acute mania, and the examina-tion demonstrated the fact that at times the patient becomes very violent threatening to kill his mother and sisters. The young man is only 21 years of age, and has been employed by J. M. Christensen and C. V. Rasmussen, commission merchants, both of whom testified to the facts brought out at the hearing. The other witnesses testified that they thought the cause of the unbalancing of his mind was hard mental study, followed by an attack of rheu-matism. The afflicted man lives with ils widowed mother and sisters, at 52 Pear street. Sheriff Naylor took him to the asylum at Provo today.

ACT I.

The orchestra gives us a loud call for silence. Then we hear it restlessly weaving and in deep but sweet harmonies representing the learned "Old Faust" in his discontent searching after knowledge, soon to be interrupted with the beautiful melody telling of Valentine's love of sister and home. "Faust" (the tenor) then begins his disconsolate lamentings-interrupted by the merry song of the youthful reapers. What a charming contrast here between the two ex-treme phases of life! The soprano voices break out like a bright sunbeam in the gloom. The male chorus that follows is equally striking, ending in the dying away chords of "Rejoice and Pray." Then comes the jocose, half weird, but always elegant, tanuting music of "Mephisto" contrasted again with the enchanting music of Love as he shows to Faust the vision of youth and love. The joyous duet be-tween the rejuvenated Faust and Mephisto ending the act.

ACT II.

The opening "Kirmess" chorus serves well as "noise music" of the rabble. But it is at the entrance of "Valenthat Gounod becomes in earnest, Emotion here begins to carry us away with not only his beautiful song, "Even Bravest Heart Must Swell," brother's love, as well as the soldier's teroism are expressed; but the very dialogue is heart-music, contrasted finely again with the comrade's call for "Wine and Song." And Mephis-to's sarcastic song, "Make Way for the Calf of Gold." a weirdly brilliant ef-fect, while the quarrel ending with the strong male chorus, where they dare Satan to harm them when they present the sign of the cross, is sublime. This soon gives way to the merriment of the dance, and the celebrated waltz chorus, interrupted by the momentary meeting of Faust and Marguerite, brings to a brilliant and happy close the second act.

This act contains perhaps the most tenderly exquisite "Love music" in ex-The entire solo cast of the opera, excepting "Valentine," are here all heard to the fullest advantage. Seibel the "boy lover," opens the scene with his "Flower Song;" then Faust's song of rapture at seeing the humble abode of Marguerite ("Salve! di Marguerite abode of Marguerite ("Salve! di mora") and then Marguerite's giorious musical work begins. Her old fashioned song at the spinning wheel, followed by that palpitating-with-joy, "Jewel Song," and the love scene that follows, with its quartets, duets and solos alternating—if it all has a fault, it is that it is too sensuously beautiful.

The bliss of we is over. Its tragic woes now be to sob and moan. Selbel's sweet g of friendship both cheers, and saddens us with its simple, earnest tenderness, when hark the bugles are sounding! Valentine rebugles are sounding! Valentine re-And we are soon carried away with the tramp of the "soldiers chorus," but only to be more deeply plunged into sorrow as Valentine learns of his sister's shame. To emphasize this, Faust and "Mephisto" appear on the scene, and the latter sings his diabolical sere takes up the insult, and we have the manly, stirring trib of the duel, where Valentine is slain. I know of nothing Valentine is slain. I know of nothing more concise, pathetic and effective in music than this scene of the death of Valentine; the outcries of the excitable crowd (chorus) the wailing of Marguerite and Selbel, the cursing of his sister by Valentine, and the few measures of awestruck tones sung by the chorus (unaccompanied) at the death, is all undescribably effective. ACT V.

The scene at the church is terribly effective as amid the organ music is heard now the gloatings of Mephistopheles, over Marguerite's prayers, now the hymns of the choir, then the calls of Demons, and ending it the beautiful passionate prayer of Marguerite, accompanied by the so-pranos, and tenors in chorus. The sec-ond scene of this act (the prison) brings the passionate music of love to us again, as Marguerite finds herself in the arms of Faust, and in her delirium she rehearses the music of their first meeting, and their love songs in the garden where he first won her affections. How passionate and earnest the love duet, and how heart-rending the parting! Then that ever ascending prayer of Marguerite, as death draws near, and she repulses Mephistopheles; higher and higher that voice soars, in the confidence of forgiveness erowning of the great work is reached as, to the demand of Satan for his victims, the grand burst of song from the heavenly choir breaks out to the words "No! Not So!

All who have sinned, May repent the sin, Let earth be severe, Heaven is forgiving." Who can hear those grand harmonies and not feel the blessed meaning of that message thrill him? Gound's im-mortal fame rests on "Faust" and it rests on a solid foundation.

AMUSEMENTS.

The attendance at the Theater last night held up surprisingly well, considering the length of the Modjeska engagement.

The house was not crowded, but the attendance was more than fair and thoroughly representative. "Macbeth" has been done so often in Salt Lake that it is small wonder that even Modjeska's fame could not arouse a wide degree of interest. Lovers of Shakespeare, however, found in her beautiful delineation of Lady Macbeth, a source of rare pleasure, and her por trayal of the many differing phases of the role was admirable. Especially the role was admirable. Especially notable was the strength displayed in the scene of Duncan's murder and in he sleep walking part. Mr. McLean assited her with a fine interpretation of Macbeth. Few men who have eselocutionary features more strikingly his reading is at all times excellent and his deep, rich tones make it pleasure to hear him give Shakespeare lines. Mr. Johnstone, while capable as Macduff, was hardly as telling as or the support can be ranked as fair.

This afternoon "Mary Stuart" is being rendered, and tonight "King John" will be repeated.

"The Eleventh Hour" has evidently "caught on" at the Grand. The atprevious night, and the signs of proval, especially over the sensationa fight in the closing act, were unbounded as ever. The engagement closes to-

The Herald did itself an injustice this morning in correcting its previous no-tice of the "King John" performance. It was right in the first instance, when said that Junius Brutus Booth played the role here some 25 years ago, but it was Junius Brutus Booth, the younger, not the elder. The elder Booth had three sons, J. B., Edwin and J. Wilkes, the latter being the famous assassin of President Lincoln. J. B., the younger, was the husband of Agnes Booth, who played the part of Constance with him Joe Wheelock was the Falconbridge in the same rendition.

It is indeed "bringing coals to Newcastle" to announce an organ recital in Salt Lake at concert prices. It is to be regretted that the noted organist. Clarence Eddy, or his advisers, could not have realized this before he came to Salt Lake. The few musicians who assembled at the Congregational church last night were greatly mortified to see the very slim audience which as sembled to greet Mr. Eddy. But th truth is that the public has had so many, and such admirable recitals at the Tabernacle without charge, that there could be no hope of attracting an audience which was required to pay admission. Mr. Eddy is so thorough a master of the instrument that his work needs no describing, and his playing of the various numbers gave rare pleasure to his listeners. Miss Stuart, the vocalist, has an execlient soprano voice, and was warmly greeted.

The Sembrich concert at the Tabernacle is set for tomorrow night. All Paust would do well to read Stephen's descriptive synopsis of nusic, printed in another column of the

S. J. Sudbury Tells Something About the Planting of Them.

S. J. Sudbury, a veteran Salt Laker called at the "News" office today and made a statement regarding the planting of the trees which were recently removed from the sidewalk skirting the Temple Block. Said he:

"I do not know who planted the first trees; but this I do know-they did not grow and were taken up to give place to trees brought from Liberty Park and planted by Carl Capson, a Swedishman now in advanced years living at Mill Creek. Mr. Capson's brother was the gardener of the king of Sweden and Carl had learned much from him in the He leaves a large family, many friends and wide interests. HEART DISEASE.

Some Facts Regarding the Rapid Increase of Heart Trouble. Heart trouble, at least among the Americans, is certainly increasing, and while this may be largely due to the excitement and worry of American business life, it is more of an the result of weak stomachs, of poer digestion. Real organic disease is incurable; but one case in a hundred of heart trouble is organic.

The close relation between heart trouble and poor digestion is because both organs are controlled by the same great nerves, the Sympathetic and Pneumo-

In another way, also the heart is affected by the form of poor digestion, which causes gas and fermentation from half digested food. There is a feeling of oppression and heaviness in the chest caused by pressure of the dis-tended stomach on the heart and lungs. interfering with their action; hence arises palpitation and short breath. Poor digestion also poisons the blood making it thin and watery, which iritates and weakens the heart.

The most sensible treatment for heart trouble is to improve the digestion and to insure the prompt assimil-ation of food. This can be done by the regular use after meals of some safe, pleasant and effective digestive preparation, like Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, which may pe found at most drug stores, which contain valuable, harmless digestive elements in a pleasant, convenient It is safe to say that the regular per-
